The Advantages of Issuing Type B Government Bonds as Financing Operations:

- Increasing Bond Market Investment, and Motivating Bond Market Development
- Guiding Abundant Funds into Infrastructure Construction, and Promoting Economic Development
- Satisfying the Self-Redeeming Financing Requirement of Special Funds Other than Enterprise Funds, and Saving Interest Expense
- Implementing Financial Responsibility of Competent Authority, and Smoothing Debt Pressure of General Fund Budget

What is Type B Government Bond

- The central government, in support of major infrastructure and for raising construction funds, may issue central government development bonds, and/or take out loans extending more than one year.
- Type A government bonds and Type A loans pertain to development funds that are not self-redeeming, while Type B government bonds and Type B loans pertaining to development funds of a self-redeeming feature.